VMAC Releases 2021 State Of The Mobile Compressed Air Industry Report

Nanaimo, B.C. — VMAC has released its 2021 State Of The Mobile Compressed Air Industry Report, sharing unique industry insights from the people who use compressed air on their vehicles.

“It is our pleasure to share the latest industry research on the mobile compressed air industry,” said Tod Gilbert, President of VMAC. “We believe the state of the industry report provides insightful information that will help business owners make plans for their successful futures.”

The State of The Mobile Compressed Air Industry Report allows industry leaders to compare their businesses against their peers across five key categories: fleets, truck classes, commercial vans, general equipment, and mobile air. An additional COVID-19 section is also added for this year’s annual survey, revealing the ways in which businesses were impacted by the global pandemic.

“VMAC’s state of the industry report is a fantastic way for owners, operators, and fleet managers in the various industries that utilize mobile air to gain insight into their industry and peers,” said Mr. Gilbert. “Nobody else is doing research like this in our space and we are proud to share this information with the customers and colleagues we serve every day.”

To gather insight on the state of the industry, VMAC surveyed 355 people between November 2020 and February 2021. Participants represented a variety of industries, including construction, agriculture, and transportation, and answered 26 questions on a medley of topics.

“Last year’s research was viewed, downloaded, and shared by hundreds of people, and published in several trade magazines and websites. It’s clear that people are interested in this type of research, and we are honored to conduct and deliver it,” said Mike Pettigrew, Marketing Manager at VMAC.
